

Bargaining and strike update

We've continued to make some progress in negotiations this week as PSAC members joined picket lines across the country to pressure the government for a fair contract.

However, there are several key issues still outstanding at the table, and talks will continue over the weekend for more than 155,000 workers at Treasury Board and Canada Revenue Agency in the hopes of reaching an agreement.

What's up this weekend?

Wondering whether or not you need to sign into a picket this weekend?

The answer is no, we will not be holding any picket locations this weekend.

But if you were scheduled to work weekend shifts, you're still on strike, and must not report to work.

Are you scheduled to work this weekend?

Please complete this form for members scheduled to work over the weekend so that you can register for alternate strike support arrangements and receive strike pay.

Top Media Hits

CTV: Treasury Board president confident a deal can be reached as PSAC strike enters third day

Global News: PSAC strike could be a 'trendsetter' for wages this year, experts say. Here's why

Vibe Check: Stepping up for workers

How many steps does it take to reach a deal?

Members are out here wearing out their shoes and racking up those steps! We have seen step counts as high as 31,000 in one day, but the most important steps of all were the steps taken in Calgary's soca line!

Flip through our Flickr account and find your friends (and maybe yourself too!).

Thank you for the incredible show of solidarity out there this week! Together we're doing something big, and by the looks of it having some fun while we're at it.

We're going to work hard to reach a fair deal for all PSAC members this weekend, but if the employer keeps dragging its feet we'll let you know by Sunday evening if you need to report to the picket lines on Monday morning.

Keep an eye on your phone and our national website for updates.

Remember, the longer the line, the shorter the strike - solidarity forever!

Public Service Alliance of Canada

233 Gilmour Street, Ottawa, Ontario K2P 0P1

Jobs with PSAC